Special Day for Canada

On October 10th, a Special Day for Canada was held in the conference room B106. The speaker, Mr. Edouard Palardy, a full-time Master's student at CUPL who's originally from Montréal in Canada, presented his country's history, culture and legal structure.

Firstly, Mr. Palardy introduced the history of Canada, not just as the country known today, but also as the geographical area that hosted the North American's natives for fifteen thousand years before the arrival of the Europeans on the Gaspé Peninsula in Quebec in 1534. Mr. Palardy explained the legal importance of the change of ruling from the French Empire to the British Empire in 1763, announcing the beginning of the hybrid legal system of Canada where Common Law and Civil Law coexists since then. The speaker introduced us with the political structure of his country instituted with the Patriation of Canada in 1982 where the country solidified its Federal Parliamentary Constitutional Monarchy system. Regarding the culture, he talked about the importance of the mountainous and highly forest dense geography of Canada, without forgetting about the cold winter climate.

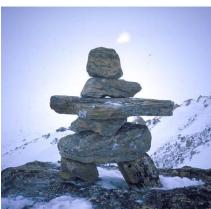

These points have an historical importance for the economic development of Canada, its wildlife and its folklore, where winter can paralyze life while the arrival of spring is highly celebrated within the Sugar Shacks with maple syrup based products. Mr. Palardy shared with us a bottle maple flavored Canadian ice wine to bring a taste of his country in the conference room. All the while, the speaker shared with us some of the First Nation's culture by introducing the Dream Catcher, a circular token that catches nightmares in its strings until the sunlight burns them. The Inuksuk was also introduced, this stone structure used by the northern most nations to find their way across the snowy barren land of the northern territories.

In the end, He shared with us some fun facts about his country, showing us how some stereotypes might hold true, from the politeness to the Canadian warmth and hospitability, leaving the audience with the desire to visit the breathtaking warmth of the frozen Canadian landscape.
